Art Unit: 3781

1. Claims 1-3, and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Heynen (1662039). Heynen teaches a package having a necktie, a box having a bottom portion and a movable top portion, a continuous elastic member 3. With respect to the necktie conceals the elastic member, it is noted that the necktie is only set forth as an intended use. There is no structural difference between the claimed package and the package as set forth in Heynen.

Similar with claim 3 wherein the claim only recites the necktie as an intended use.

2. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Heynen in view of Lobner (1677146). Lobner teaches the position of a retaining strap being on a center line. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to position the strap at the centerline to provide the desired position for holding the neckties.

3. Claims 1, 2, 3, 5, 10, and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Louder (690864). Louder teaches a package having a necktie, a box and a movable top portion (lid, page 1, ln. 20), and an elastic member (portion 7) mounted at portions 10 in spaced locations. Applicant is noted that the term "elastic" is broad and encompassing "resilient member". Attention is directed to Sulentic (1501249) with the device in Fig. 4 is called "elastic" (pg. 1, ln. 33), and Corossman (1578807) (pg. 1, nl. 59). With respect to the necktie conceals the elastic member, the tie in Louder conceal the bottom portion of the elastic member as claimed. It is noted that this is similar to that of applicant wherein the necktie conceal the middle portion with the two sides of the elastic member being exposed.

4. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Louder. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a resilient clip with fist and second spaced locations are on a centerline to provide additional clip at the desired location for the device.

5. Claims 1, 2, 3, 5, 10, and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Levy (2057838) in view of Heynen. Levy teaches a box with a bottom and a device loop 19 for holding the necktie. Levy meets all claimed limitations except for the loop portion being made of elastic material. Heynen teaches that it is known in the art to provide an elastic material. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a loop portion of Levy from elastic material to provide an alternative device for holding the necktie.

6. Claims 8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over anyone of Heynen, Louder or Levy rejections as set forth above in paragraphs 1, 3, and 5 and further in view of Sanchez or Hallam. Sanchez teaches a fabric cover 72. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a fabric cover in Heynen to provide attractive color and/or for advertisement. With respect to the matching color with the tie. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to provide a tie with matching color and patten to provide the desired aesthetic look. It is noted that matter relating to ornamentation only which have no mechanical function cannot be relied upon to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. In re Seid, 161 F.2d 229, 73 USPQ 431 (CCPA 1947).

7. Applicant's arguments have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. With respect to the Heynen rejection of claim 1. The amended claim only recites the box as an intended use. Thus, the structure of the necktie with respect to the elastic portion is an intended use only. Applicant is noted that a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim.
